British veterans parachute over Normandy 75 years after D-Day

Queen Elizabeth and other world leaders thanked and applauded the D-Day veterans.

REUTERS

Two British war veterans in their mid-90s parachuted over the fields of Normandy, northern France, on Wednesday, 75 years after they jumped behind German defenses on D-Day in an operation that helped turn the tide of World War II against Adolf Hitler.

Dressed in red jumpsuits, 95-year-old Harry Read and 94-year-old John Hutton performed tandem jumps with the British Parachute Regiment's freefall display team, the Red Devils.

Against a pinkish evening sky blanketed in dark clouds, the parachuters left swirling crimson smoke trails as one carried a giant Union Jack. Both veterans landed safely and looked up as the sky was filled with dozens of domed, khaki chutes, now as then.

Read was just 20 years old and Hutton, known to his friends as Jock, was still a teenager when they leapt out of their transport aircraft under cover of dark with the British 6th Airborne Division in the early hours of June 6, 1944.

"It was a different world then. It was a world that required young men like myself to be prepared to die for a civilization that was worth living in," Read said.

"So there was a very heavy necessity for young men like me to put my life on the line. My life wasn't on the line today," he added, describing the jump as "thoroughly enjoyable."

They were among more than 8,000 soldiers who were tasked with protecting the Allied left flank from counter-attack as the biggest seaborne invasion in history landed ashore and advanced inland.

Earlier, some 280 British and French paratroopers re-enacted the D-Day airdrops near the Norman town of Sannerville in honor of the airborne assaults 75 years ago.

Representing the U.S. airborne forces, American veteran Tom Ride parachuted, too, in nearby Carentan, France.

"It went perfect, perfect jump," the 97-year-old D-Day veteran said. "I feel great. I'd go up and do it all again."

The commemorations brought together the greatest number of Douglas C-47 Dakota aircraft since World War II, flying the same route as they did 75 years ago.

The drop zone for the events in Sannerville was one of four used by the division on D-Day.

Just past midnight that night, the 8th (Midlands) Parachute Battalion landed in the very same fields, then code-named Drop Zone "K."

Their objective: Destroy three German-held bridges to cut off nearby reinforcements from responding to the Allied invasion, then set up a defensive barrier in nearby woods.

But bad visibility and missed drops meant the battalion was scattered across a wide area and faced a perilous trek to the rendezvous point through ground dominated by a German tank division. They maintained their defensive front for 10 days. REUTERS

2 YouTube reversal bans Holocaust hoaxers

YouTube said on Wednesday it would remove videos that deny factual catastrophes such as the Holocaust ever happened and stop sharing ad revenue with channels that skirt too close to its rules, a major policy reversal as it fights criticism that it provides a platform for hate speech and harassment. The streaming service, owned by Alphabet Inc.'s Google, said it was taking aim at videos claiming school shootings and other "well-documented violent events" are hoaxes. It also will remove videos that glorify Nazi ideology or promote groups that claim superiority to justify discrimination. In addition, video creators that repeatedly brush up against YouTube's hate-speech rules, even without violating them, will be removed from its advertising revenue-sharing program, YouTube spokesman Farshad Shadloo said. 3 House Democrat says impeachment support lacking

A top U.S. House Democratic committee chairman on Wednesday appeared to rule out any imminent impeachment probe of President Donald Trump, but vowed quick court action to obtain the full, unredacted Mueller report on Russian election interference. House Judiciary Committee Chairman Jerrold Nadler told reporters that he could ultimately pursue a formal impeachment inquiry against Trump, a move that progressive Democrats and outside groups have increasingly sought since the release of a redacted version of U.S. Special Counsel Robert Mueller's report in April. But he later told CNN that there is not currently enough backing among Democrats in the House. "There does not appear to be support for it now. And we will see. The support may develop," said Nadler, whose committee has jurisdiction over impeachment-related matters. REUTERS

4 Sanders urges Walmart to boost 'starvation wages'

Democratic U.S. presidential hopeful Bernie Sanders on Wednesday told Walmart Inc. shareholders and top executives that the world's largest retailer should boost the "starvation"-level wages it pays its workers and stop fueling income inequality. "Despite the incredible wealth of Walmart's owners" the company pays "starvation wages," Sanders said at Walmart's shareholder meeting. He presented a shareholder proposal asking the company to give hourly employees a seat on its board and raise base wages to $15 an hour. Walmart's "wages are so low, many of these employees are forced to rely on government programs like food stamps, Medicaid and public housing in order to survive," Sanders said. "The American people are so tired of subsidizing the greed of some of the largest corporations in the United States," he added. REUTERS

NYC violent crime declines as hate crime instances, arrests spike

Police data shows a drop in violent crime, while hate crime instances are on the rise.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

GETTY IMAGES

Hate crimes are on the rise in New York City, despite a lower number of reported crimes like murders, rapes and robberies. The NYPD data comes as the city unveils a new network of resources that aim to make NYC a safer place for everyone.

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced that the Office for the Prevention of Hate Crimes (OPHC) will open this summer, a combined effort by the NYPD, City Commission on Human Rights, Department of Education, Department of Probation, Mayor's Office of Immigrant Affairs and District Attorney's Offices to prevent hate crimes while developing and coordinating community-driven prevention strategies to address biases fueling hate crimes.

"In New York City, we celebrate and uphold our differences and reject any attempt to hate or divide," de Blasio said. "The Office for the Prevention of Hate Crimes will work to root out hate and make our streets safer, which is why we're moving up the timeline and opening the office months ahead of schedule. We will never stand idly by while our fellow New Yorkers are targeted because of their race, religion, sexual orientation or any other quality that makes them who they are."

Last month, the Wall Street Journal reported that the NYPD had 176 complaints of hate crimes from Jan. 1 to May 19, an 83 percent increase compared with the same period in 2018.

Police data found that while arrests for hate crimes are rising faster than complaints, a spike in anti-Semitic hate crime reports made up the majority of the overall increase. Hate crime complaints surged from 50 to 103, or 59 percent of hate crimes during that period.

> "People are frightened all across the city, and as an elected official, it hurts to say that."
> Corey Johnson, City Council speaker

"People are still frightened," Council Speaker Corey Johnson told NBC New York. "People are frightened all across the city, and as an elected official, it hurts to say that. I want everyone in our city, the greatest city in the world, to feel safe and to feel protected."

The new Office for the Prevention of Hate Crimes combines non-law enforcement deterrence such as public education campaigns, outreach and community safety models and preventative best practice. Officials said that this includes developing diversion programs and other strategies so that the NYPD, District Attorney's Offices, defenders and judges have options beyond arrest and prosecution to deal with hate crime perpetrators.

There were 18 attacks motivated by the victim's sexual orientation, three more than in 2018; 18 targeting victims who were black, up from 14; and 11 hate crimes in which the victims were white, up from three in 2018.

The NYPD said 75 people had been arrested in connection with the crimes.

NYPD releases video of man who set rainbow flags ablaze

On the eve of Pride month, two rainbow flags were set on fire outside of Alibi Lounge in Harlem, a venue that prides itself on being the only black-owned LGBTQ lounge in the city.

On Friday evening the bar tweeted out an image of their burned Pride flags, writing "some a—hole set our rainbow flags on fire! It's a hate crime!", along with the hashtags #pride and #rainbowflag.

The suspected hate crime occurred at about 12:15 a.m. in front of 2376 Adam Clayton Powell Jr Blvd. Police released video footage of the act on Wednesday morning and offered a reward of up to $2,500 for information leading to the suspect.

Recalling the night, bar owner Alexi Minko told CBS, "All of a sudden someone knocked on the door and screamed 'fire.' When we looked out, we could see both flags completely blazing." NBC reported that Minko stomped the flags with his feet and that the pouring rain helped put out the fire.

No one was hurt, and there was no further damage reported.

Along with the video, the NYPD Hate Crimes Task Force tweeted photographs of the flag-burner.

Government officials have condemned the attacks and offered words of support to New York's LGBTQ community via Twitter.

Gov. Andrew Cuomo tweeted his disgust for the crime and offered NYPD the assistance of the New York State Police's Hate Crimes Task Force.

Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand also condemned the attacks via Twitter and encouraged the community to keep celebrating.

Mayor de Blasio tweeted words of encouragement, reminding New Yorkers that "love is stronger than hate."

In an interview with NBC, Minko said the police needed the burned flags for evidence, and that he has since replaced them with "bigger, brighter, bolder flags."

Anyone with information about this crime should call NYPD's Crime Stoppers Hotline at 1-800-577-TIPS (8477). For the Spanish language, call 1-888-57-PISTA (74782). All calls are confidential. BECCA GLASSER-BAKER

Rapper Meek Mill. GETTY IMAGES

Meek Mill granted fresh chance to overturn conviction

The rapper's legal woes have sparked boisterous public outcry for legal reforms.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

Philly rapper Meek Mill has been granted a new trial and judge, and a fresh chance to argue against his 2008 gun and drug conviction, according to NBC Philadelphia.

Pennsylvania Superior Court granted Mill a hearing after years of vying for a chance to argue to get his conviction overturned due to questions about the credibility of the arresting officer.

"We're looking forward to the oral argument before the Superior Court of Pennsylvania and to, hopefully, having Mill's conviction vacated," Mill's attorney, Jordan Siev, said in a statement. "In light of the district attorney's recent filing, where he supports the granting of a new trial to Mill and the recusal of Common Pleas Judge Genece Brinkley, we hope to have this injustice rectified once and for all."

Meek Mill, whose real name is Robert Rihmeek Williams, became a symbol for criminal-justice reform after Brinkley sentenced him to two to four years in prison for minor probation violations.

Problems between Mill and Brinkley go way back, according to Rolling Stone magazine.

Brinkley, who sentenced Mill to 90 days of house arrest following a February 2016 probation violation, had sentenced him to 11 to 23 months following his conviction in 2008.

Then in March 2017, Mill was charged with misdemeanor assault following a scuffle at an airport, and was arrested in New York for popping wheelies on his dirt bike without a helmet, and served five months before the Supreme Court ordered him freed while his appeal of Brinkley's sentence was pending last April.

Brinkley sentenced the rapper to two to four years in prison for violating his 10-year probation, citing a failed drug test, failure to comply with a court order restricting his travel, and the misdemeanor charges.

Defense attorneys had called for a new trial and judge for Mill on several occasions, claiming that the Common Pleas Judge abused her discretion and has held bias against him. Brinkley rejected the accusations and refused to recuse herself from the case before filing a 48-page opinion to the Superior Court that Mill's sentence is "reasonable."

Two months later, Mill's team demanded the conviction be tossed based on the involvement of former Philadelphia Police Officer Reginald Graham — the only officer involved in Mill's arrest who is on a "Do Not Call" to testify list due to alleged corruption issues — after a slew of overturned convictions. According to NBC Philly, Brinkley issued a 47-page denial under the Post Conviction Relief Act a week later.

> "We hope to have this injustice rectified once and for all."
> Jordan Siev, Mill's attorney

Philadelphia District Attorney Larry Krasner filed an appeal for a retrial last month, pointing to a "public perception of unfairness and bias" as well as a time when the judge showed up at a homeless shelter to check on the rapper while he worked his community service requirements, among other instances where Brinkley allegedly overstepped her duties as a judge.

The public outcry in support for Mill peaked when Jay-Z's label Roc Nation, where Mill is signed, urged fans to sign a Change.org petition addressed to Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Wolf asking the state to re-evaluate Mill's sentence.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Bezos scoops up three Flatiron apartments for a record-setting $80M

The deal may be the largest to ever close in NYC south of 42nd Street.

ALEXANDRA ALEXA
letters@metro.us

GETTY IMAGES

The Wall Street Journal reported that Amazon Chief Executive Jeff Bezos is closing on three apartments at 212 Fifth Ave., next to Madison Square Park. Bezos is scooping up a penthouse and two units that are right under it for approximately $80 million, though the precise numbers haven't been made public yet.

Combined, the apartments add up to over 17,000 square feet. The deal is reportedly the largest to ever close in New York south of 42nd Street, and the second-largest deal of the year, second to Ken Griffin's now-infamous $240 million penthouse at 220 Central Park South.

As CityRealty reported, the penthouse was initially on the market for $73.8 million in 2017 before being reduced to $58 million earlier this year. The sprawling unit is spread over three floors and boasts a seven-room master suite.

There's plenty of outdoor space as well, with a nearly 5,000-square-foot terrace on the second floor in addition to a smaller roof terrace with views of the Empire State Building, the Flatiron Building and the World Trade Center. The other two units sold for a collective $28.45 million, according to sources close to the deal.

The building at 212 Fifth Ave. dates back to 1913, when it got its start as a neo-Gothic office building designed by Schwartz & Gross. More than 100 years later, Madison Equities helmed a conversion of the building to over 50 condominiums, through a partnership that also involved Building and Land Technology and Thor Equities. Led by Helpern Architects, the redesign kept many of the historic details of the facade intact and created decadent residences inside.

The deal comes several months after Amazon announced it would no longer be building its second headquarters in Long Island City and amid his divorce from wife MacKenzie Bezos. Bezos has reportedly been searching for a New York home for a while, and considered the penthouse at the XI, the Bjarke Ingels Group condo in West Chelsea.

Reports also said that he was recently checking out apartments at 220 Central Park South (where the Griffin sale occurred). Previously, Bezos lived with his wife at 25 Central Park West. It's unclear if either of them is residing in the Upper West Side building.

Don't fret, Trump tells nervous Ireland, Brexit will work out

Donald Trump, arriving in Ireland for the first time as U.S. president on Wednesday, sought to reassure the country that Britain's exit from the European Union would work out fine for its near neighbor.

Prime Minister Leo Varadkar used a meeting with Trump, who has been a vocal supporter of Brexit, to underline Ireland's concerns over the departure that could affect it more than any other country remaining in the 28-member bloc.

How to keep E.U.-member Ireland's currently seamless 350-mile border with Northern Ireland open after Brexit and ensure it does not jeopardize two decades of peace in the British province is proving the most intractable issue in Britain's tortuous efforts to leave the E.U.

Before meeting Varadkar on his arrival at Shannon Airport, Trump said he expected the premier would ask him about Brexit and it would all work out "very well" for Ireland.

"The way the border works now is good; you want to try and keep it that way and I know that's a big point of contention with respect to Brexit. I'm sure it's going to work out well," Trump told reporters.

Trump also told Varadkar the problem with "your wall, your border" was similar to the border situation in the United States, before the Irish prime minister jumped in to say the main thing Dublin wanted to avoid was a border or a wall between both sides.

Some 3,600 people were killed during Northern Ireland's "Troubles," a sectarian conflict between mainly Protestant unionists, who want Northern Ireland to remain part of the United Kingdom, and predominantly Catholic Irish nationalists. The 1998 Good Friday peace deal, which the United States helped broker, largely ended the violence.

While Trump on Tuesday promised Britain a "phenomenal" post-Brexit trade deal, U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi used a visit to both sides of the Irish border last month to warn that her fellow lawmakers would not agree to any such deal if Brexit ends up undermining peace in Ireland.

After he and Trump met, Varadkar said the president understood Brexit cannot result in the return of a hard border on the island. REUTERS

IS BLUE LIGHT REALLY HARMFUL?

METRO INVESTIGATES HOW TRENDY BLUE-LIGHT-BLOCKING GLASSES WORK AND THE SCIENCE BEHIND THEM.

WHAT IS GOING ON?

Ophthalmologists have confirmed that it became popular to filter out parts of the visible spectrum.

Many brands now offer blue-light-blocking glasses, mainly to those who spend most of the day looking at screens.

But it is not confirmed that this light is harmful.

WHAT IS BLUE LIGHT?

It makes up the highest-energy portion of the visible light spectrum.

Red light — the low-energy one.

These two wavelengths, and everything in between, are what the human eye can register as color.

However, there's a lot more light beyond this spectrum that we can't see. For example, ultraviolet radiation (that exists past the blue end of the spectrum and could cause macular degeneration and cataracts), from which we protect ourselves with sunglasses.

WE NEED BLUE LIGHT TO SURVIVE, BECAUSE IT:
Regulates the body's circadian rhythm.

Improves cognitive function
Elevates mood

"The concern with blue light has really gotten to another level."
Sunir Garg, a clinical spokesperson for the American Academy of Ophthalmology, stated to the media, adding that a fiery ball in the sky exposes us to blue light more than our screens.

WHAT DOES IT ALL MEAN?

LEDs mostly emit blue wavelength.

But, according to scientists, there is no clinical sign or evidence that people are being harmed by it.

And it is not a new "dystopian phenomenon" causing us to go blind.

"BLUE LIGHT IS NATURE'S METHOD FOR KEEPING US AWAKE AND HAPPY."

"Smoking increases the risk of macular degeneration... Exercise and eating a proper diet reduces your risk for vision loss as you get older... And that's good data and good science."
Sunir Garg

A conversation with BRIC's Kristina Newman-Scott on diversifying the arts

Earlier this week, Brooklyn nonprofit arts organization BRIC (Brooklyn Information & Culture) celebrated the opening night of its "Celebrate Brooklyn!" concert series in Prospect Park with a triumphant performance by soul legend Patti LaBelle. As thousands of New Yorkers fled into the park for the concert, we caught up with BRIC's new president, Kristina Newman-Scott, at the organization's opening-night REVEL celebration to talk about bringing a wide variety of different programs to the borough, as well as the need to have diversity in leadership roles in the arts.

How important do you feel it is to have both diverse and strong female leadership in the arts?

In general, we know that by 2050 in America, people of color will be the — or are the — emerging majority. So we were all surprised when we saw the survey from the Andrew Mellon Foundation a few years ago talking about the lack of diversity in art spaces given that art spaces are thought of as one of the most progressive, obviously creative, and celebratory of our varied culture, right? Every single job I've had since I moved to the United States in 2005, I've been the first woman of color immigrant. I don't like celebrating that fact. I really would like to not be and I know we're changing, but we're changing too slowly. It's wonderful that women are the majority in the workforce in the arts sector, but they're also not getting pathways to leadership as fast, no matter what their ethnicity is. There are not enough pathways to leadership.

So for me, I think it's paramount that we make sure that when somebody like myself — I'll speak for myself — that I'll focus on my replacement parts and who comes after me, and I'm not going to decide what that person looks like or what their socioeconomic background [is] or what their abilities are, but I'm going to make sure that the process is as open and inclusive as possible so that all the people who are voiceless have a voice and get seen and heard.

It seems like those roads are paved by paying it forward.

One hundred percent and I take that very seriously. I'm not trying to be at my job 30 years saying, "Oh, I'm still the …" That's not my goal. [There is] the saying, empowered women empower women. And I think that's real. And I'm where I am today because of my mother, because of so many women in my life who've empowered me, and kind of kicked me in the butt when I needed it, but showed me the way. And I'm definitely passing that on.

BRIC does such a great job at energizing the community to get involved with the arts while also bringing great programs to neighborhoods that may not be considered by many to be "art hubs" within the city.

I mean, here's the thing. BRIC is such a unique organization because we were given, our genesis story is really from "Celebrate Brooklyn!", right? We were in the borough president's office in the 1970s and then we became, slowly we kind of organically grew up into BRIC, our three focus areas being media, performing arts and visual arts. We're committed to making sure that across the borough, while a lot of people are excited about what's kind of "now" in terms of arts and culture, we're very committed to the process and what's potentially next in arts and culture. And with that, we want to spread a wide net. We want to make sure that we're a national brand and we have a national influence, but our commitment is to Brooklyn. We are Brooklyn's cultural living room for a reason. It's because of 40 years of being like, oh yeah, no, we're not just located here. We are Brooklyn. And with that comes the responsibility of making sure that so many different places across the borough feel at home at BRIC.

It's such a welcoming place. Do you see that spirit while booking these programs and events?

I'm not from Brooklyn. I'm from Jamaica. I lived for 13 years in Connecticut. I'm literally a Brooklynite of nine months so I am not going to profess to knowing all about Brooklyn. I will say this, though: Brooklyn is one of the most welcoming communities I've ever been to. But I also think that the arts and cultural vibe in Brooklyn has always been on point. I mean, ask Mr. Spike Lee, right?

People have been doing amazing artwork for a long time in this borough and I think it's great that the cache it has is bringing more visibility. But I think with or without the cache of the world's eyes, Brooklyn will always be powerful and will always be New York's true heartbeat, culturally. I believe it. That's why I'm here. PAT KING

How I ditched debt: 'It made our marriage so strong'

In this series, NerdWallet interviews people who have triumphed over debt.

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

Bailey and Ray Robertson
Paid off: $33,456 in 18 months

Ray Robertson's debt-payoff journey involves two fateful conversations across the ocean from where he grew up.

The first was a blind date with his future wife, Bailey. Ray had moved from Canterbury, England, to the Nashville, Tennessee, area for a soccer scholarship at Martin Methodist College and met Bailey soon after graduating in 2012. The second meeting was about a year later, Thanksgiving 2013, when Ray asked Bailey's father for his marriage blessing.

He got the blessing — with a stipulation. Bailey's father wanted the couple to enroll in Dave Ramsey's Financial Peace University. The two signed up for the video-based money course in 2014 and found it to be "life-changing," Ray says. They began learning how to budget, hold each other accountable and set goals, including paying off about $33,000 in combined debts.

The Robertsons began tackling these debts in August 2014, after moving to Houston, where Ray made about $55,000 as project manager for a hospital in the Texas Medical Center. Bailey's substitute teaching, paired with a handful of tutoring sessions and Ray's occasional refereeing, added roughly $5,000 in annual income, although that figure fluctuated. Each month, the couple threw about $1,500 toward their debt and paid extra after receiving their tax refunds and selling Ray's car and other items.

This aggressive payoff strategy, along with a lean lifestyle, tight partnership and plenty of planning, enabled the Robertsons to eliminate their consumer debt in 18 months. Now Ray, 31, and Bailey, 29, are back in Nashville, where they own a home and raise their 15-month-old son, Callum.

Bailey and Ray, who is now a personal finance coach in addition to working as a product manager, recently connected with NerdWallet to share their story, which may inspire your own journey in paying off debt.

What was your total debt when you started your repayment journey, and what is it now?
Ray: We had a little over $33,000 in consumer debt: About $18,000 for Bailey's student loans, nearly $14,000 for a car loan, about $800 for a bank loan balance, and a little over $400 for an immigration lawyer.

We completely paid off this debt between August 2014 and February 2016. Now, our only liability is a mortgage, which has a current balance of $299,000. Our goal is to pay that off by 2030.

What was your debt-payoff strategy?
Ray: We utilized the debt snowball — we listed our debts from smallest to largest in value, and then worked through them. So for us, that meant tackling the balance for the immigration lawyer, then the personal loan, followed by the auto loan and finally student loans. The momentum of paying off these debts kept us motivated.

Did you use any tools to help you track your payments?
Ray: When we first started our journey, I used an Excel spreadsheet with tabs for income, expenses and debts. Then Dave Ramsey dropped his app called EveryDollar, which did everything my spreadsheet did. So I was an early adopter of that and still use it to this day.

What was your lifestyle like while you tackled your debts?
Ray: We truly lived like no one else. While our friends were going out to dinner, we were cooking; when they were at happy hour, we were working our second jobs; when they were buying new cars, we were budgeting every dollar to throw as much at debt as possible.

What was the most challenging part of living this way?
Bailey: Living in a city with such lavish restaurants. It was almost a punishment not to be able to go and indulge in one of our favorite activities — eating!

How did you two discuss money and hold each other accountable?
Ray: We'd sit down every single week to look at our budget and calendar. We'd make sure we were both on the same page in terms of what we're spending, and what money is coming in and going out. That communication, especially in the beginning of a marriage, is so key. Paying off this debt together made our marriage so strong.

And the best thing about a budget is that it's kind of an informal contract between the two. If one of you buys something random, you've pretty much broken the trust of your partner.

How do you talk about money now?
Bailey: Now that we are both on the same page, most of it has become routine conversation and check-ins. Ray makes and tracks the budget — he's a serious budget nerd — and we review the budget together at the beginning of each month. If we start to get off track, Ray gives me a heads-up, and we adjust a few categories so that we always hit our goals.

What are your current goals?
Bailey: Become mortgage-free so that we can build a legacy for our family. Also, I don't ever want money to be the source of anxiety or frustration.

Ray: My goals right now are to pay off our house by 2030 and become a millionaire by age 40. We just had a baby, so we want to raise him and maybe have another in a couple years.

What advice do you have for young couples working together to pay off debt?
Bailey: Have open, in-depth conversations about your goals and dreams. This will get you on the same page and make you work together without question. Ray and I have learned to be a good balance for what each other needs. I can let him know when he is throwing too much of our money into our future instead of now, and Ray lets me know vice versa.

Ray: Include your spouse, and listen to their point of view, and just be really honest about what each person's goals are. And remember that you're in a partnership. You're with this person for the rest of your life, so you've got time to figure this out. It's not going to work perfectly the first time you write a budget. It's going to take a few iterations.

How to ditch your own debt
Inspired by the Robertsons' debt-free journey and want to start your own? Here's what you can do:

Make a budget.
Identify a plan for your income, so you know how much you can devote to debt repayment and other expenses. We're fans of the 50/30/20 budget, which suggests you spend about 50 percent of your take-home pay on necessities, 30 percent on wants and 20 percent on savings and paying off debt.

Earn extra income.
The Robertsons brought in additional money by refereeing soccer games and tutoring students. They also sold one of their cars, as well as some electronics, appliances and furniture. Consider ways you can make more money that you can pay toward debt.

Airlines scramble to overcome polluter stigma as 'flight shame' movement grows

In Lorna Greenwood's London home, there is a shelf lined with travel guides. But the 32-year-old mother and former government employment lawyer has given up flying. Greenwood, who grew up enthralled by the possibilities offered by plane travel, is part of a growing group of environmental activists in Northern Europe who are shunning flights as concerns about global climate change increase."It's a tough pill to swallow, but when you look at the issues around climate change, then the sacrifice all of a sudden becomes small," Greenwood said.A Swedish-born anti-flying movement is spreading to other European countries, creating a whole new vocabulary, from "flygskam" which translates as "flight shame" to "tågskryt," or "train brag."

A number of famous Swedes have stopped flying, including opera singer Malena Ernman, the mother of teenage activist Greta Thunberg who has thrust climate change into the spotlight."Flygskam" was a major topic at a three-day airline summit in Seoul this weekend, with global industry leaders launching a counter-offensive.

"Unchallenged, this sentiment will grow and spread," Alexandre de Juniac, head of the International Air Transport Association (IATA) told some 150 CEOs.The industry says it is shrinking its carbon footprint and its sustainability plan is among the most ambitious and globally focused of any industry."Come on, stop calling us polluters," de Juniac said at a news conference after detailing the global initiative. The IATA said the CO2 emission for each CEO's flight to Seoul was half the amount of a 1990 flight, largely thanks to more fuel-efficient aircraft.

STRUGGLE

Commercial flying accounts for about 2.5% of global carbon emissions today but without concrete steps, that number will rise as global air travel increases. The aviation industry has set out a four-pronged plan to achieve carbon-neutral growth from 2020 and halve net emissions from 2005 levels by 2050.But airline leaders acknowledge they have struggled to articulate their plans in a way that resonates with the public. When CNN anchor Richard Quest asked a room full of aviation executives whether they had used an often available booking option to offset emissions from their own flights to the South Korean capital, only a handful raised their hands. The industry's plan rests on a mix of alternative fuel, improved operations such as direct flight paths and new planes or other technology. But a widely publicized March study funded by investors managing $13 trillion said airlines were doing too little.

OFFSET SCHEME

Questions remain over how airlines will slow, steady and finally reduce harmful emissions. Use of sustainable-fuel would have the single largest impact, reducing emissions from each flight by around 80%, according to the IATA. The problem is that it is in short supply.

In Europe, eliminating dozens of national airspaces borders could reduce fuel consumption by around 6 percent, but lobbying for a Single European Sky has been bogged down for years.

Airlines say small steps like single-engine taxiing and the use of lighter materials are cutting around 1-2% of emissions each year.In the absence of a quick and substantial reduction its carbon footprint, the industry has committed to a carbon-offset program. In Stockholm, Susanna Elfors says membership on her Facebook group Tagsemester, or "Train Holiday," has spiked to some 90,000 members from around 3,000 around the end of 2017.

"Before, it was rather taboo" to discuss train travel due to climate concerns, Elfors said. "Now it's possible to talk about this on a lunch break ... and everybody understands." REUTERS

HBO show success drives Chernobyl tourism boom

The success of a U.S. television miniseries examining the world's worst nuclear accident at Chernobyl has driven up the number of tourists wanting to see the plant and the ghostly abandoned town that neighbors it for themselves.

One Chernobyl tour agency reported a 40 percent rise in trip bookings since the series, made by HBO, began in May and which has attracted outstanding reviews. English-language tours usually cost around $100 per person.

Last April marked the 33rd anniversary of the Chernobyl disaster in then-Soviet Ukraine, caused by a botched safety test in the fourth reactor of the atomic plant that sent clouds of nuclear material across much of Europe. The HBO miniseries depicts the explosion's aftermath, the vast clean-up operation and the subsequent inquiry.

The area around the plant retains the feel of a post-apocalyptic wasteland, where stray dogs roam and vegetation encroaches into windowless, abandoned buildings strewn with rubble.

In Pripyat, the ghost town once home to 50,000 people who mainly worked at the plant, an amusement park houses a rusting hulk of a merry-go-round and dodgem-car track, and a giant Ferris wheel that never went into operation. The wheel was to open on May 1 — the traditional May Day holiday.

Sergiy Ivanchuk, director of SoloEast tours, told Reuters the company saw a 30 percent increase in tourists going to the area in May 2019 compared with the same month last year. Bookings for June, July and August have risen by approximately 40 percent since HBO aired the show, he said.

Yaroslav Yemelianenko, director of Chernobyl Tour, said he expected a similar increase of 30 to 40 percent because of the show. His company offers a special tour of locations depicted in the series, including the bunker where the initial decision by local officials not to evacuate after the explosion was made.

Day-trippers board buses in the center of Kiev and are driven 120km (75 miles) to the area, where they can see monuments to the victims and abandoned villages and have lunch in the only restaurant in the town of Chernobyl. They are then taken to see reactor No. 4, which since 2017 has been covered by a vast metal dome 105 meters (344 feet) high which envelops the exploded core. The day finishes with a walk around Pripyat.

"Many people come here, they ask a lot of questions about the TV show, about all the events. People are getting more and more curious," said tour guide Viktoria Brozhko, who insists the area is safe for visitors. "During the entire visit to the Chernobyl exclusion zone, you get around two microsieverts, which is equal to the amount of radiation you'd get staying at home for 24 hours," she said.

SAME SKY

When Craig Mazin, the creator of the "Chernobyl" miniseries, came to visit before writing the show, he said of his experience: "I'm not a religious man, but that's as religious as I'll ever feel. To walk where they walked felt so strange, and also being under that same piece of sky you start to feel a little closer, in a sense, to who they were," he told an HBO podcast.

The disaster and the government's handling of it — the evacuation order only came 36 hours after the accident — highlighted the shortcomings of the Soviet system with its unaccountable bureaucrats and entrenched culture of secrecy. The accident killed 31 right away and forced tens of thousands to flee. The final death toll of those killed by radiation-related illnesses such as cancer is subject to debate.

A Belarusian study estimates the total cancer deaths from the disaster at 115,000, in contrast to the World Health Organization's estimate of 9,000. "You can't really come to Kiev and not take the opportunity to see this unique place," said Gareth Burrows, a 39-year-old nurse practitioner from southern England. "We only ended up watching the show because we were already coming, but I think you will see an increase in tourism because of the show, it will definitely spark interest."

Thieme Bosman, an 18-year-old student from the Netherlands, worries that the bump in tourist numbers will have a downside. "There are quite a lot of tourists already here and it does kind of take away the experience of being in a completely abandoned town, so I think if more and more tourists come here that will ruin the experience," he said.

USWNT goalkeeper Naeher has big boots to fill at World Cup

The 31-year-old is ready to emerge from Hope Solo's shadow.

United States goalkeeper Alyssa Naeher has big boots to fill at the Women's World Cup as she belatedly earns a chance to be the leading lady on the biggest stage after graduating from her previous role as understudy.

Naeher was on the bench at the 2015 World Cup and 2016 Olympics when the larger-than-life Hope Solo was the custodian in goal for the Americans.

Solo, an outsize personality who had a commanding presence in the box, made the goalkeeping spot her own for eight years and more than 200 appearances, including at five consecutive major tournaments.

But when Solo was suspended by U.S. Soccer for derogatory comments about the Swedish team at the Rio Olympics, coach Jill Ellis entrusted Naeher with the job.

Nearly three years later, the 31-year-old Chicago Red Stars player is poised to finally play in a World Cup instead of looking on from the bench.

Yet though Naeher has made 45 international appearances, questions have been asked about whether she will rise to the occasion in France in the manner Solo did for all those years.

Solo's predecessor, Briana Scurry, was one to broach the subject.

"There's one difference this World Cup team has, the U.S.A., that no other team previously has had, and that's a question mark at the goalkeeper position," Scurry said at a reunion for former national team players in New York City.

FOCUSED

Naeher was subsequently asked about Scurry's remark, and she deftly handled it with a poise that her teammates hope she can similarly display on the field in France, where the Americans will be defending their world title.

"I stay focused on me," Naeher said recently.

"And I am trying to be my best version of myself every single day. I compare myself to who I was yesterday and try to be better each day. I don't compare to anything else. I try to be Alyssa and that's all I can control."

Scurry subsequently expanded on her "question mark" comment by explaining that she was not trying to impugn Naeher's competence, but that one never knows how a player will perform in their debut on the game's biggest stage.

Naeher knows that being Solo's successor brings pressure ("She was the best at what she did for a very long time") and is trying to stamp her own mark on the job.

"It's a very unique position and you bring your personality to it," she said.

"I've been fortunate to train with a lot of great goalkeepers over my years and I think I've taken pieces from each of them."

Modern soccer has evolved in that coaches are increasingly looking at their goalkeeper not only to keep the ball out of the net, but also to initiate attacks by effective distribution.

That is not lost on Naeher.

"Goalkeepers are now not just shot-stoppers but an 11th player," she said.

"The game has kind of grown in that regard, and we have to play a little bit more and do more with our feet, so I've put a lot of time into that and making sure I'm comfortable and confident in that role."

The U.S. open their World Cup campaign against Thailand next Tuesday in Group F, which also comprises Sweden and Chile.

Taking a look at Pete Alonso's magical start

It's been an impressive 59 games for the Mets rookie first baseman.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Can you believe the Mets kept Pete Alonso down in the minors last year because of his defense?

The rookie first baseman continues to mash in 2019, hitting his 20th home run of the season during Tuesday night's loss to the San Francisco Giants.

Alonso brings a brand of power that is not usually seen in this organization — which has prided itself on pitching for most of its 57-year existence.

Look how far that's gotten them.

But the 24-year-old's dazzling introduction to Major League Baseball has only confirmed that the Mets, for a change, have gotten something right.

Alonso leads the team in home runs, RBI (45), and OPS (.958) while ranking third in batting average among qualified hitters.

He certainly doesn't look like a rookie as he's experienced a rip-roaring 60-game start to his career.

Let's take a closer look at just how rare it's been.

Could the Nets get

Brooklyn could make a huge splash this offseason.

JOE PANTORNO

The Anthony Davis trade sweepstakes is officially underway. GETTY IMAGES

Even with the NBA Finals in full swing, the rumor mill continues to heat up around the association.

On Tuesday night, it was throttled into high gear. The Athletic's Shams Charania reported that New Orleans Pelicans vice president David Griffin began listening to trade offers for star center Anthony Davis.

It seems as though Griffin's attempts at coaxing Davis to stay in New Orleans were futile, offering the promise of teaming up with Zion Williamson. The Pelicans were awarded his rights by winning the No. 1 pick of the 2019 NBA Draft last month.

Since Davis' trade request over the winter, the usual suspects of the basketball world were immediately linked to a deal.

LeBron James nearly broke the Los Angeles Lakers apart as he attempted to orchestrate a deal that the Pelicans were not interested in doing.

That sentiment has carried into the offseason. Pelicans owner Gayle Benson made it known that Davis won't be traded to the Lakers, per Zach Braziller of the New York Post. Even if David Griffin is reportedly a fan of Brandon Ingram.

in on the Anthony Davis sweepstakes?

around the Davis trade talks as they could offer a young combination of Marcus Smart, Jaylen Brown, and Jayson Tatum.

The major player though — especially over the past few months — has been the New York Knicks, who could throw together a monster package in a possible Davis deal. That's even after missing out on the No. 1 pick at the draft lottery.

New York could put together an offer that's headlined by the No. 3 pick in the 2019 draft which is the rights to Williamson's college teammate, RJ Barrett.

They also can offer two first-round draft picks acquired in the Kristaps Porzingis trade with the Dallas Mavericks along with promising young talents like Kevin Knox, Mitchell Robinson, and Frank Ntilikina.

It turns out that the Knicks could have some serious competition for Davis from their New York neighbors, should they decide to get in on the sweepstakes.

While the Brooklyn Nets have not been officially considered a suitor for Davis, Charania reported that they are one of the four teams likely to pursue the 26-year-old.

D'Angelo Russell's future in Brooklyn remains unknown. GETTY IMAGES

It could be a risky move considering Davis has not listed the Nets as a team he would be willing to re-sign with. He is set to hit free agency following the 2019-20 season and would be reportedly interested in committing long-term to the Knicks, Lakers, Milwaukee Bucks, or Los Angeles Clippers.

However, the Nets could put together quite an appealing offer for Davis and if the dominoes fall correctly, could persuade him into staying with Brooklyn.

ESPN's Stephen A. Smith reported on First Take on Tuesday that All-Star point guard Kyrie Irving has "given every indication" that he wants to go to the Brooklyn Nets.

It's important to take reports like this on these tabloid-like talk shows with a grain of salt, but it's just the latest instance of Irving-to-Brooklyn picking up steam.

Vegas' odds have also tabbed the Nets as the favorites to land the six-time All-Star, which would prompt sweeping changes.

The problem is the Nets already have a point guard with a similar style to Irving as D'Angelo Russell developed into an All-Star this past season under Kenny Atkinson.

As a restricted free agent, it couldn't have come at a better time for the 23-year-old, but Irving provides Brooklyn with an elite point guard with championship experience.

If Irving is on the Nets' radar, making Russell the centerpiece of a deal could be Brooklyn's best shot at getting Davis from New Orleans.

Suddenly, you're looking at a core of Irving and Davis in Brooklyn to help bring in more top-tier talent in free agency.
